

The apple tree

A father had two children, they were walking on a path. One child was on the shoulder of the father and the other was holding the hand of the father. They reached a beautiful apple tree.

The child who was holding the hand of the father, let it go and rushed running to the tree. He fell down on a stone. The father reached the tree and the other child could take the fruit easily.

Often we want to overcome God and want make our own way, so we suffer. If the child had kept the hand of the father, the father would have given an apple to the child. If we surrender to God, in a period of trouble, like Jesus did in the garden of Gethsemanie, we will overcome all sufferings and reached the highest goal.
